

Ways to Make Money Now: Idea#2: Flyer for an Estimator

Independent Contractors

Now you can win more bids!

It's tough working as an independent contractor. Drywall? Electrical? Plumbing? HVAC? No matter what type of contracting you do, you don't seem to have enough hours in a day once the busy construction season gets into full swing.

Is there a better way?

You work all day at a construction site. You're tired, when you come home at night. You want to relax and spend time with your family. Maybe your wife helps out with ordering, invoicing and paying bills for the business. But you still have to track job costs. And then, if you want to keep the projects rolling in, you have the all important bid estimates to prepare. And you know how much time it takes to get your estimates right!

Spring is right around the corner. Construction is ready to launch into the busy season. You can't help wondering...is there a better way?

Do you spend too much time preparing bid estimates?

How many hours a week do you spend on calculating bid estimates? Are your estimates the best they can be? What percentage of submitted bids do you win? Calculating bids can be tricky. Some guys are good at it and others struggle with the process. These days there are computer programs to help with job estimates. The trouble is, a computer program is no substitute for the human eye. And often estimates generated by computer programs can be off by as much as 10%. Sure, you can add 10% to your bid. But will you win the bid?

What's better than a computer program?

Here is what Stan Conner, drywall contractor, has to say, "Hank's estimates always come within 1-2% of actual cost. Now I win over 90% of my bids. He is amazing. His estimates improved my bottom line. Not only that... the hours of work he saved me, mean more time for my kids. And my wife is happy too!"

Stan found out how good my estimates are and you can too.
